

Dr Kiang Hiong TAY, MBBS, FRCR, FAMS, FSIR, FCIRSE

Dr Tay is currently the Head of the Vascular and Interventional Radiology Department and Assistant Chairman of the Division of Radiological Sciences at Singapore General Hospital. He is Associate Professor at the Duke NUS Graduate Medical School Singapore as well as at the Yong Loo Lin School of Medicine in National University of Singapore. Dr Tay is also the Vice Chair for Clinical Service Transformation of the Singhealth Duke NUS Radiological Sciences Academic Clinical Program.

Dr Tay did his medical and radiology training in Singapore. He was inducted as Fellow of the Royal College of Radiologists (FRCR) in 1997, Fellow of the Academy of Medicine Singapore (FAMS) in 2003, Fellow of the Society of Interventional Radiology (FSIR) in 2010 and Fellow of the Cardiovascular and Interventional Radiology Society of Europe (FCIRSE) in 2018. Under the Ministry of Health's HMDP and National Medical Research Council's Scholarships, Dr Tay did a 1 year clinical fellowship and a 6 month research fellowship in Interventional Radiology at the University of British Columbia in Canada in 2000/2001.

Dr Tay has authored/co authored more than 90 peer reviewed publications and 380 oral/poster presentations. He has delivered more than 250 invited lectures at national and international conferences, held 15 research grants and 2 patents.

Dr Tay is Visiting Consultant to the KK Women and Children Hospital and National Heart Centre Singapore. He is also the President of the College of Radiologists Singapore.