Brief description

Associate Prof Dr Pang Yong Kek is currently a lecturer in the Faculty of Medicine, University Malaya, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. He is also a senior consultant respiratory physician at the University Malaya Medical Centre - which is a teaching hospital affiliated to the Faculty of Medicine. He started his career in the Ministry of Health and had worked in various hospitals before crossing over to the University in 2002. He has a wide range of research interest, which includes lung infections (especially tuberculosis), obstructive airway disease, interstitial lung disease and lung cancer. He is very active in continuous medical education and had been invited to speak on various respiratory disorders in many conferences nationwide, and in the Asia Pacific region.

He has been an active member of several professional societies. One of these is the Malaysian Thoracic Society, where he is the current President. Besides, he is also a member of the Lung Foundation of Malaysia's trustee board.
